Research and Thesis

A Thesis titled "The State of Present Civil Society in Bangladesh: A Newspaper based Analysis" Submitted to the Department of Political Science, University of Rajshahi, July-2018.

Synopsis of the Thesis

Civil society has become an important discourse to fill up the purposes of social, political, economic development and democratic consolidation in Bangladesh. It is recognized that civil society is engaged in establishing democracy, ensuring good governance, protecting fundamental rights, preserving social security etc. even before the emergence of Bangladesh in 1971. In connection to such development and democratic activities of the civil society, this research has been conducted to understand and evaluate its performance and position in 2017. Civil society related news published in the Daily Prothom Alo and the Daily Ittefaq in 2017 have been considered as primary data in this research. The nature, types of the civil society organization, their working spheres and strategies have been revealed through the analysed data. This research has shown that civil society has become matured in the field of their organizational skills as well as welfare activities in 2017. But comparatively advocacy function of civil society in the political system is still poor in 2017. However, based on the literature review, it can be assumed that, though poor in relation to development performance, civil society has become relatively more active in their advocacy functions than the previous years. Moreover, some civil society organizations are acting now as watchdog upon the government's policies and functions. This research has suggested that, for a sound political system and to ensure democratic consolidation, civil society should come forward with their vivid, neutral and vigilant performances. At the same time, co-operation among the government, political parties and civil society as well as the practice of democratic culture may ensure a powerful civil society in our country.
